

FRIDAY EVENING, FEB. 19, 1858.

A PRINCIPAL IN THE TENNESSEE SENATE.—The Senators from Maury and Shelby counties, Messrs. Whitthorne and Walker, varied the proceedings of that body on Monday by engaging in a small fist-cuff. The circumstances, as we learn from the Nashville Union and American, are: Mr. Whitthorne rose to a point of order. Mr. Walker, interrupting, said the gentleman from Maury had risen to a point of order, but was proceeding to the discussion of something else. Mr. Whitthorne replied, that showed how little he knew about it. Mr. Walker rejoined that Mr. Whitthorne had been drunk all the morning and wondered if he thought him so. Mr. Whitthorne retorted that it was a d—l lie. Whereupon Mr. Walker struck him in the face with a book, and the parties clinched. They were separated without material injury to either; and the matter was reported the next morning amicably and harmoniously adjusted, each making an apology to the Senate for the violation of its dignity and decorum.

THE GARDEN PURCHASE.—From a letter published in the Pacific Sentinel, dated at Tucson, we extract the following:

Tucson contains about five thousand inhabitants; of them, one half are peons, as the Mexican custom still prevails. They have about two thousand acres under cultivation, on which, by irrigation, they raise a crop of corn and a crop of wheat annually, and have done this on the same land for the last eighty years, and it produces good crops. They use Mexican implements altogether. Corn sells at Fort Buchanan, eighty miles distant, for five cents per pound, and here at three. This country is undoubtedly very rich in mineral wealth. Pyrites mines, Sonora mining company, are inexhaustible in ore. Mexican miners here regard it as an extraordinary mine. From what I can learn and see, I am convinced that this is one of the richest mineral sections of North America. It is not strange that it is not developed when we consider how long the wealth of California lay sleeping under Spanish possession. The Apaches have harassed the frontiers for one hundred years, and are perhaps as bad as ever, but I have faith in believing that they will soon be cleared out. Although this is a fine stock country, yet there is but little here, in consequence of the above said individuals appropriating them to their own use. At this place all the cattle are driven up at night and placed in corrals. The herdsman carries his gun to protect himself and be prepared for the Apache. However, the people of Tucson are none the loser, as they have several times gone out and captured stock from the Apaches, who are not brave, and will not fight unless they have the advantage.

CAPTAIN PARR'S PETITION IN THE U. S. SENATE. A few days since, in the U. S. Senate, Gov. Seward said:

Mr. President, I present a communication from Captain William P. Parr, a citizen of the State of New York, residing at Albany, in which he states to the Senate that he desires to contribute his aid to the extent of his abilities in sustaining the authority of the United States in the Territory of Utah; and he submits a plan in which his services can be engaged, and solicits the action of Congress upon it. He requests me to have his petition read; but as the rules of the Senate do not allow that, I will state very briefly what this plan is. It is to raise a regiment of a thousand men in ten companies, to be armed with the minnie rifle, himself to be the colonel of the regiment, and the field officers and staff to be appointed by himself; the officers of the line to be elected by the respective companies; the pay to be the pay of officers and soldiers of the Army of the United States; the term of service to be the duration of the difficulties which it is expected to assist in subduing; the compensation extra to be three hundred and twenty acres of land to each officer and soldier at the close of the service, on condition that he becomes an actual resident of the Territory. The proposition, therefore, is similar to the one adopted in the conquest of California. I will barely state, in presenting this communication, that it is made in good faith, and that the person who makes it is a man of respectability and character, of military skill and acquirements, and a patriotic citizen. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. The motion was agreed to.

FORGIVING AS A SCIENCE.—Our readers, says the Journal of Commerce, may have heard of the noted woman Gottfried, who lived in Bremen a quarter of a century ago. She was a widow of fascinating appearance, in her youth beautiful; in more advanced life, still attractive by those preparative and decorative arts, of which woman knows so well how to avail herself. All connected with her sickened and died in strange ways. Two husbands, her father, her mother, her brother, and several children disappeared in a short period of time. It was her lot to order no less than thirteen coffins from the undertaker, who lived opposite to her, and all for near and dear friends. Gottfried faithfully nursed them during their painful illness. She was an object of pity and sympathy, while she seemed wonderfully resigned to the inscrutable decrees of Providence. A perfect Niobe in her childhood was she appeared to be, and a Niobe she was, for her heart was as hard as that celebrated statue. Received into good society, her company was courted by persons of rank and consideration.

Twice a widow, she still had suitors. She had a well furnished house, and easy fortune. But still she continued to drink of the cup of affliction, was still pitted and prayed for. A model of the tender affection, she loved intensely; but her love killed every object on which it alighted. The venerated parent, the manly husband, the beautiful children, withered and died! A Mr. Rumpff and his wife, though dissuaded by friends, took lodgings in the same house with Madame Gottfried. She was all kindness to them and theirs. But Madame R. was seized with vomiting, and died under the assiduous nursing of this disguised Alecto. The children and servants met the same fate, and received the same attentions. She gave them all their death-potion, and smoothed their dying pillow. Mr. Rumpff himself was seized; he ransacked the house from garret to cellar to find the cause; he believed there was some decaying substance, some fætal exhalation, like that of the National, which did all the mischief; he had the boards lifted, and the walls examined, all in vain, but at length a white powder was observed on a bit of meat, which had been left, and it proved to be arsenic. Madame R. was arrested, imprisoned, and, though at first affecting great horror at the idea of being accused as a murderer, finally confessed to all, and to much more than she said she could remember. She was sentenced to be beheaded, and that head preserved in spirits, and her skeleton in a case may now be seen at the museum at Bremen.

AN ENGLISH DIVORCE TRAGEDY.—The following waif is going the round—how true it is we know not:

Some years since, Lord Talbot was granted a divorce by the English House of Lords; his wife, a modest and unassuming woman, having been charged with an amour with an illiterate groom. The principal witness against her was the family clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Seagrave, who swore he caught her in the act of crime. This clergyman, after giving himself up to the authorities, confessing that he had perjured himself by conspiracy, and that he had no reason to suspect the state of affairs which he had sworn to. He is now almost insane from remorse. The prosecution of Lady Talbot made her a maniac, and she died without recovering her reason. Lord Talbot married another woman who proved herself all he had charged his first wife with, and as soon as he died. He died horribly, in the midst of his beastly orgies, with a company of degraded women. Thus vengeance has overtaken all the parties to this diabolical conspiracy.

The New England Courant—Benjamin Franklin's newspaper—in 1726, contained the following advertisement: "Just Published and Sold by the Printer Hereof." Hooped Petticoats Arraigned and Condemned by the Light of Nature and Law of God. Price 3d.

[From the London Times.]

THE PRESENTS TO THE PRINCESS ROYAL.—Yesterday afternoon the representatives of the public were admitted to Buckingham Palace to see the magnificent collection of bridal gifts which have been presented to the Princess Royal by every member of the royal family, by most of the illustrious guests who have lately honored her Majesty with a visit, and by some of the chief personages of the illustrious house with which she is now so happily connected.

The exhibition of wedding gifts on these occasions is generally made with some display of taste and skill in the combination of colors and general effect, so as at least to exhibit the objects fairly, if not to set them off to advantage. Under such circumstances, and with proper management, such displays are often very attractive; and with the intense interest which attaches to all relating to the Princess Royal, it would not be easy to render gifts to her other than deeply interesting. If anything, however, could have detracted from the effect, and even interest, of these magnificent caudex, it was the manner in which the functions connected with the palace displayed them. We do not speak of the style in which they were put together on a table in the small billiard room. It is quite possible that the arrangement might be a matter of taste; but it surprised us to find that many of the presents were left without anything to indicate the quarter from whence they came, and the only information beyond the name of the person who gave it, which it was in any case possible to obtain, was the cost price of almost every article exhibited, and whether it was silver gilt, or only gilt on "metal." This ungracious knowledge, which is generally kept so carefully in the background when gifts are in question, was, as we have said, almost the only kind obtainable beyond the actual sight of the anonymous notices to which it related.

One functionary, however, possessed not even this limited information, though he knew the things "were very valuable as he was put there to prevent them being stolen." Most of the articles, however, were ticketed with the name of the illustrious individual from whom they came, so that a catalogue raisonné could be formed which we append, only as a general rule withholding the price list. The most conspicuous among the brilliant mass was the present of the King and Queen of Prussia—a lofty open coronet of diamonds, the design of which, with its spires of brilliant stones open work between, is probably one of the most chaste and graceful that has ever been executed. Equal with this are those given by H. R. Majesty. The first is a broad diamond necklace, with a treble row of the most brilliant drops and long-pointed terminals, which match the light tracery of the coronet. The second gift from the royal mother consists of three massive brooches, somewhat in the style and size of the Scotch plaid brooch, but which, instead of having an open clasp in the middle, are in each case fitted with a noble pearl of the very largest size and purity of color. The Prince Consort gives a superb bracelet of brilliant and emeralds, which is beautiful both in design and execution, and is altogether a most costly present. This has additional interest in the eyes of visitors from its being one of the bracelets which the young bride wore at the Royal Chapel on Monday last. That which she wore on the left arm was also a diamond and emerald bracelet, presented by the gentlemen of the Royal Household, but which, though a splendid present, and probably equal in value to the Prince's, is much inferior to it in design and still more so in the manner in which it is set.

The gift of the Prince of Wales is in rich beauty of effect far superior to them all. It is a suite of ear-rings, brooch, and necklace of opals and diamonds; but the opals, in play of color and iridescence, are superior to any we have yet seen, and the design of the settings is quite in keeping with the exquisite beauty of the stones they inclose. As we have said, in magnificent and at the same time chaste effect, this gift surpasses all. But the present of the bridegroom is perhaps the most costly, though in appearance the most simple of any. It is a necklace of pearls, and our readers may easily judge of their value when we say that the necklace, though full-sized, only requires 36 to complete the entire circle, which graduates in size from the center, tapering less and less in size of jewels as it approaches each end. The three center pearls in this superb circle are said to be of great value. The Queen gives a third present of three silver candelabra, which form the most regal looking group in silver we have ever seen. The center piece springs from an elaborate base, and is surrounded by large groups of figures exquisitely chased in full relief. This supports between 20 and 30 branches, and is four feet high. The two others are to match the center, and are equally elaborate and almost equally massive and lofty. There was no ticket to indicate whom this was given to, one of the authorities stating most positively that it was a present from the Queen to the bridegroom, while another asserted that it was presented to the bridegroom's father. As, however, the former statement seemed infinitely more probable, we must believe it to be the correct one.

The Princess of Prussia gives a truly regal gift of a stomacher brooch of brilliant. The stones in this superb ornament are large and the purest water, and the setting and design are exquisite. The Princess Alice gives a small, but beautifully formed brooch of pearls; and the Princesses Helena, Louise, Victoria give each a massive stud brooch or button, similar in shape to those in diamond and pearl of the Queen's gifts, which we have already mentioned. These brooches are of massive gold, ornamented with pearls and emeralds, pearls and rubies, and pearls and sapphires. The Duchess of Cambridge gives a noble bracelet of diamonds and opals, and the Princess Mary her portrait in massive gold frame and stand. One of the most beautiful of all, however, is the gift of the bride's royal father-in-law, the Prince of Prussia. It is a magnificent necklace with pendant of exquisite design. It is composed of pure brilliant and turquoise, and is called, from the size, rarity, and value of the latter gems, the turquoise necklace. The bride's grandmother, the venerable Duchess of Kent, gives a most magnificent and useful present. It is a large and most costly dressing-case, containing sufficient articles to fit out the toilet tables of a dozen ladies of quality, and all of which are of massive silver gilt enriched with bright red coral.

The simplicity and exquisite beauty of the designs for these things are not to be surpassed. Next probably to this in costliness, though infinitely reduced in regard to size, is the gift of the Maharajah Duleep Singh, which is one of the most fairy-like opera-glasses ever used by lady. The design is elaborate—arabesques of gold on white enamel, with a double border and enrichment of diamonds. In a little card-box, with a delicate fringe left out to show the pattern, is the gift of his Majesty the King of the Belgians. It is a Brussels lace dress made expressly for the young bride, and our readers will be able to judge of its exquisite beauty and carefully elaborated workmanship when we state that it is valued at no less than 50,000 or 42,000 sterling. The Duchess of Saxe-Weimar gives a magnificent bracelet of rubies, diamonds, and emeralds, and the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg gave plain gold bracelets with enamel miniatures of the givers on each. Conspicuous among the piles of jewelry and plate is a characteristic gift, a large edition of the sacred volume—a Bible, bound in the most costly and gorgeous style. On the fly-leaf is inscribed:

"The Committee of the British and Foreign Bible Society to her Royal Highness the Princess Royal, on the occasion of her marriage, with sincere prayers to Almighty God for her happiness in time and eternity. January, 1858. President."

There is also a writing-desk to match the dressing case, and in which the contents are equally valuable and chaste. This is the gift of the Duchess of Buccleuch. The Marchioness of Breadalbane gives a toilet hand mirror, with the frame of massive gold set with pearls, and the handle composed entirely of one brilliant cairngorm. Other things are there, too, which were rich and costly in the extreme, but none of them were ticketed, nor was it possible to ascertain from whom or whence they came. Of the gifts presented from the schools at Balmoral—the gifts of embroidery and Berlin work—the thousand nameless little tokens of affectionate remembrance which the young bride has received from all parts—not one was shown. The bad taste of such an exclusion needs no comment. It was, however, stated that all, even of what was costly, had not been displayed. This may very likely be the case, and may also account for the absence of any gifts from some of the late Royal guests.

A RECKLESS MAN.—A man named Bill Farr was killed on last Christmas day, at Tehama, California. Bill was a notable character in his way. The Red Bluffs Beacon says of him:

Our readers will remember an advertisement that appeared in our paper last spring, stating that Bill Farr would fight a grizzly bear, single-handed, on the 4th of July, at Tehama. His life seemed of no consequence to him. We have frequently heard him remark that he would as soon be killed as not, and upon every occasion he actually knew of his standing up very coolly with a person as reckless as himself, each taking a shot at the other's hat, a distance of fifty steps, as it remained on his head. The result was that Bill's hat was shot through, and a small bunch of hair cut away, while the skin on the other man's cranium was laid bare for three or four inches by Bill's half-ounce ball. Bill was a great terror to the Indians, having killed a great many in his time; some of them, as he said himself, he shot to see them fall.

AMERICAN EMIGRANT AID SOCIETY.—Six Young Ladies Abducted—A Great Outrage. Yesterday a handsome and youthful Irish girl made application to Mayor Wallace for a home. Her name is Mary Ann Dunn. She stated that she, with six other, all young girls, had left New York city about two weeks ago, in the care of agents of the American Emigrant Aid Society to come West, where, it was represented to her, and the rest, employment could be immediately procured. Some of those who started with her were left at Cleveland; others were left at Cincinnati, in this State; and she was brought here, Chloroform, according to her representations, had been administered to her while on her journey, and for two or three days she was unconscious. What may have befallen her can be imagined by those who understand diabolical human nature. In this city she was domiciled, she says, at a well-known public house, where she remained from Saturday night week up to yesterday. Yesterday she alone, and without a friend, went to the mayor of the city, as one most publicly known, and most likely to have it in his power to aid her, and related her story. His Honor immediately provided respectable and comfortable quarters for her, performing not only his official duty, but his duty as a philanthropic citizen.

The fate of the other girls who left New York city along with Miss Dunn is unknown. If, like her, it was a hard one and most outrageous, so far as those acting in the name of the "American Emigrant Aid Society" are concerned, Miss Dunn had been engaged in New York city as a cook at $8 per month, and as a seamstress at a little better price. She is young and pretty, and, as we have distinctly intimated, fell into the hands of a cunning man who, for the most shocking of purposes, sought to possess her. It was represented to her that the West afforded her opportunities of speedily doing better. So she and the other unfortunates came West.

We sincerely hope that this matter, so far as Miss Dunn is concerned, will be probed to the bottom, and the offenders, as they are most certainly offenders, brought to condign punishment. In the hands of his Honor, Mayor Wallace, we have every confidence that can be done will be done.

FURTHER FROM MEXICO.—The extraordinary states that the representatives of the foreign powers had acknowledged the new Government, and argues that such was their duty. "Within the last seven weeks," it says, "we have had four distinct Governments—under the constitution, the plan of Tacubaya, the constitution again, and now we have the plan of Tacubaya, as reformed in Mexico. There could be no greater objection made to the present Government than to the second or third in the catalogue. All the others were recognized." The same paper states all the principal acts of the late Government, under the plan of Ayutla, had been overthrown. "The Law-Lerdo, for the disamortization of church and corporation properties," it says, "has been annulled and the properties of the church restored; the Law-Juarez, for the abolition of the ecclesiastical and military tribunals, has been annulled, and the forces reestablished."

The extraordinary also says: "The celebration of the new laws took place on Thursday afternoon, Jan. 28th. The military passed in review through our principal streets; the balconies were crowded with people, and from some balconies garlands were flung upon Gen. Osollo, the hero of the Acordada. The usual crowd of dirty and ragged people filled the streets. As for popular enthusiasm there was none. The soldiers seemed well pleased, and the representatives of religious societies manifested the utmost satisfaction. Reports are current on the streets that already the new Government has filled the coffers of the treasury department, which have long been in the most desolate condition. It is understood that the clergy have loaned the Government over $1,000,000.

Only one house, that of Juan Jose Baz, is reported to have been sacked by the rabble, the provisions and furniture were lost on both sides; the wounded amounted to one hundred and twenty. Buildings, however, suffered greatly from the firing.

TRAINING HORSES.—It is a curious fact that if you suffer a two-year colt to break his halter, or break away from his fastening on a first trial, he will never forget it. He will pull and pull again, that you may have a timber chain around his neck and one end around the largest tree. He will pull and pull to get away, for he remembers that he has once succeeded in breaking his halter, and he has not judgment enough to distinguish between a halter and a timber chain. Some men see the difference after the halter is broken, and this proves that they have more judgment than colts.

[Correspondence of The Press.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16, 1858.

The Lecompton Investigating Committee of the House met to organize last evening. Although the House after a resort to parliamentary maneuvers on the part of the minority to prevent any investigation, ordered, in the most decided terms and the most unequivocal manner, that there should be one,
to make clear to all whether or not the Lecompton
constitution had the approval of the people of Kansas, the committee substantially voted that there should be no such investigation.
The majority of the committee voted down all inquiries into the legality of the votes, the returns, the frauds, &c., of the election held on the 4th day of January last. This is important, when it is remembered that on that day there was not only a vote on the Lecompton constitution, but also a vote for State officers. The country desire, and those who voted for the investigation on the part of the House desire, I am sure, that the cloud of doubt which rests upon these votes shall be lifted; and it is apparent that this can be done alone by Congress or one of its committees.

It was also intimated by the majority of the committee that the inquiry shall be closed this week. It seems, therefore, that no valuable inquiry will be prosecuted.

MEMORANDA.—Steamer Diana left New Orleans on the 11th of February at 6 o'clock P. M. No boats in port for Louisville. First night stopped on the coast and took cle Sam above Plaquemine; met Woodford at Waterloo; lay by in fog at Red river 9 hours. 13th—met R. J. Ward in Dead Man's bend; David White at Natchez. 14th—met Chancellor at the mouth of Yazoo river; H. D. Newcomb at the head of 95. 15th—met Fanny Bullitt at Napoleon; Pacific at Montgomery's Point. 16th—met Empress at

There is an average business in American securities without quotable changes.
A meeting of the board and stockholders of the Erie Railroad had been held in London to hear an explanation from the president, Mr. Moran. He states that their difficulties have arisen from an inadequate capital and an enormous and mismanaged
 floating debt, but considered that there was a clear possibility of surmounting them and obtaining a fair remuneration to the shareholders for their outlay. A motion authorizing the creation of a fifth mortgage of five millions dollars was carried after a division.

XXXVTH CONGRESS—FIRST SESSION.

Friday's Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.

Senate.—The private calendar was taken up.

House.—Mr. Hoard of N. Y., rose to a privileged question and sent up to the clerk to be read a letter from Mr. Burns of Ohio, to the following effect:
 "You took occasion on Friday to read from the New York Tribune a false and foul slander against me, the tenor of which charges you knew, if true, would disqualify me from holding a seat in the House. You repeated the slander without provocation. I pronounce the paragraph a slander of the foulest kind. If you suppose me guilty of the crime, I ask you to examine into its truth or falsehood. If it is found to be true, I will resign my seat."

Mr. Hoard desired to respond to the letter, but objections were made. He insisted that he had a right to be heard on the ground that Mr. Burns's letter was threatening and calculated to intimidate Mr. Burnett, of Kentucky, called Hoard to order, saying that he would explain by letter. Mr. Ord-ings, of Ohio, wanted to know whether the friends of Burns would insist upon replying. Objections were made. Mr. Hoard made another ineffectual effort at explanation. On motion, it was—

Resolved, That, when the House adjourns, it be Tuesday next.

The private calendar was then taken up.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.

 amount on deposit in the U. S. Treasury on Monday was $6,338,000, subject to draft $4,228,000. Receipts for the week $650,000.

St. Louis, Feb. 19.
The Kansas correspondent of the Democrat says the Topeka Legislature reported on the 10th. The codifying committee reported a complete code of laws. Concurrent resolutions were introduced setting forth that, as the President advocates the passage through Congress of the Lecompton constitution, Gov. Robinson be requested to correspond with the Governors of States friendly to the people's government in Kansas and solicit aid in case
 it should be necessary to resist such encroachment upon the principles of republicanism. An election in Atchison county, on the 8th, for member of the Council, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Carr, Democratic congressman elect, resulted in the choice of Chellis, Democrat, over Wheeler, free State man, by 250 majority. On the 4th of January, the same county gave over 100 free State majority.
